Guwahati airport fog: what 63,573 reports show

Three and a half years of half-hourly visibility observations for LGBI Airport (VEGT), and what they mean for a pre-dawn flight.

63,573

routine reports, January 2023 to October 2026

- Half-hourly, local time
- Sources: the airport's own METAR record, republished by the Iowa Environmental Mesonet

Every figure in this deck is reproducible from the open CSV at github.com/iamjabirul1/guwahati-airport-visibility-data

Low visibility has a season

- That is five times the rate in the fog season.

Period	Below 1.5 mi (2.4 km)	Below 1.0 mi (1.6 km)
December, January, February	49.7%	15.9%
All other months	9.8%	1.1%

It also has an hour

- Peak at 06:00, which is exactly when pre-dawn departures are moving.

LOCAL HOUR	REPORTS BELOW 1.5 MI
04:00	34.2%
05:00	36.7%
06:00	38.5%
07:00	36.1%
08:00	30.7%
09:00	23.1%

Fog codes cluster in two months

- METAR FG appears in 382 January reports, 156 December reports and 29 February reports across the series.
- Every other month is in single digits.
- December 1 to February 15 before 10:00: 79.8% of reports were below 1.5 mi (4,029 of 5,052).

What this is not

- Reported visibility is not a delay, cancellation or runway record.
- A 2,000 m report with mist is routine here; CAT III aircraft and trained crews operate well below 1.5 km.
- Read the numbers as how often the airport looks like this, not how often your flight is late.

What we do with it

- December to mid-February, a pre-dawn departure is planned on the airport side of the city.
- Booking advice: an afternoon arrival, or a buffer day, if you are flying in on a festival morning.
- The free Northeast trip planner uses the same data for its fog warning.
